Small Fire on Central Avenue Called Out Department Sunday Morning-Swedish Fair Closed Saturday Night

An alarm from box 226, North Main and Erin streets, Sunday morning about 10.30 o'clock called out the department for a small fire on the front porch of the house at 10 1-2 Central avenue, occupied by George Bartis and others. The occupants keep their ash barrel on the porch, and just previous to the fire a pan of hot ashes had been dumped into it. The ashes set fire to some paper in the barrel and the flames set the lattice work on fire. The companies made a quick response, but the fire had been put out before they arrived on the scene. Small damage resulted.

DOES NOT APPLY TO COUNTY AGENT LINCOLN de la Not Under Civil Service, Says

Attorney General Light. Attorney General John H. Light has anded down a sequel to his opinion f Wednesday, in which he held that the state normal schools are not in-cluded in the classified lists of the civil service commission, by assuring President Charles L. Beach of the Connecticut Agricultural college that employes of that institution do not come under the rulings of the commission. The question was raised in con-nection with the appointment of Murray D. Lincoln as agricultural advisor and was regarding the standing of Mr. Lincoln under the law. The attorney general repeats his assertion of Wednesday that the civil service law should not apply here, as the spoils system which it was intended to remedy was never in force at the institution. His opinion follows: President Charles L. Beach, Connecticut Agricultural College, Storrs, Connecticut, Dear Sir: I have your favor in which "The trustees of the Connecticut Agricultural college are empowered to appoint and remove managers and teachers (Section 4395, Revised Sta-

The rustees receive funds from the support of the college from which the salaries of the faculty are paid. Are the members of the faculty subject as to their appointment to the provisions of the state civil service law?

ice law ?" It appears of record that the Con necticut Agricultural college was first established, under the name of the Storrs Agricultural school, as a private enterprise, and that it was afterward (1881) taken over by the state and placed in the hands of a board of trustees empowered to hold in be-half of the state such lands, money and other property, as may be donated for the purpose of maintaining said college. The board of trustees is required to apply all funds for the support of the college, and to appoint and remove managers and teachers, prescribe the studies and exercises of the pupils, rules for its management, and for the admission of pupils. In short, the board of trustees has all power and responsibility for the sucpower and responsibility for the suc-cessful conduct of the college, and it is safe to say that managers and teachers have always been employed on the sole basis of proven ability and on the sole basis of proven ability and efficiency, uninfluenced by political consideration. Therefore, the evils of the spoils system, which the civil services act was intended to suppress, never existed in the college, and for that reason conditions there could not have been considered when the legislature enacted the civil service law.

It has been held that which is not in the purpose or meaning, nor within the mischifef to be remedied, is not included in the statute, even though it be kithin the letter. (Taylor against McGill 6 Lea 294)

McGill, 6 Lea. 294.)
I find no express or implied power n our statute extending its provisionus to the Connecticut Agricultural college.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that the appointment of Mr. Lincoln as ag-ricultural advisor is not subject to the conditions of the state civil service law. Yours very truly,

The sugar planters and sugar manufacturing journals refer to young Mr. Cockrell as one of the notable inventors of the age. The "Cockrells" as the machines are called, will be appeared into Cuba, Java, Mexico and the Hawaiian Islands and will prove the salvation of the southern sugar making industry, by cheapening the operations of manufacture.

The sugar manufacturing journals comment on the fact that the young inventor has had the fate of all of his guild, and that now, after his eleven years of struggle, his invention is so big that unlimited money has come to his aid. The machines are being manufactured in Louisville, Ky., where Mr. Cockrell is president of the Cockrell Manufacturing Company, Limited, and where he has his office. It is here that Henry C. Cockrell, recently of Norwich, is associated with his brother.

The development of the marvelous machine reads like a fairy tale. During the brief cycle of Louisiana grinding the young machinist would try his invention, every year getting nearer to the perfect model. Finally the time came when the completed machine was given a trial on Reserve Plantation, New Orleans. Like magic it demonstrated its qualities, cutting, topping and stripping 200-fact rows of cane in twelve minutes, without pause or interruption. Field Manager Bourgeois said the cane would make twenty-six tons to the acre. It was all of the D74 variety. The canes were cut wherever the chauffeur—the machine runs by its own gasoline power—wanted to cut them, either at the ground line or a little below it or a little above it; the point of cutting being entirely optional. These efficers for the new lodge were elected during the evening and installed: Past dictator, Charles D. Beaver; dictator, Joseph A. George; secretary, Frank B. Hazard; treasurer, John Ringland. They are to serve for the balance of the current term, and at the next meeting the remaining officers of the lodge will be elected and installed. After the business of the institution of the lodge had been concluded. Districe National Dictator Fitzgerald of New Haven gave a brilliant cration on Moosedem and sneouraged the new membership towards working for a home in the near future. He was followed by Deputy Supreme District Dictator William E. Burke of New Haven in very acceptable remarks upon Bouvier, who has been here for three weeks, engaged in the organization of the lodge, was the concluding speaker, and he roused much enthusiasm when he predicted that the outlook is that a lodge of 700 members is a possibility before he has finished his work here.

The lodge has selected Eagles' hall as its regular meeting place and will meet on the first and third Tuesdays of the month. This brings their next meeting on the 19th, when there will be a large class to be initiated and prominent members of the order will be present.
